ONE HUNDRED YEARS AGO

The Daily Telegraph

LONDON, DECEMBER 1920

LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

MEMBERSHIP OF COUNCIL.

FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT, GENEVA, SATURDAY NIGHT.

For three hours and a half this evening the Assembly discussed the report of No. 1 Committee on the method of electing four non-permanent members of the Council of the League. The Assembly was by no means ready to accept the resolutions put forward by Mr. Balfour, as chairman of the Committee, nor was the chairman himself satisfied that they were the best means of attaining the desired object. In the end they were completely recast, and were given the form of recommendations rather than of positive formulas for adoption by the Assembly. This conciliated the opposition, and the report was approved by the great majority.

Before the formal proceedings of the sitting began the President offered, on behalf of the Assembly, congratulations "to our illustrious colleague, M. Bourgeois," on having been awarded the Nobel Peace Prize. The President's words were greeted with the most prolonged and unanimous applause yet heard in the Assembly.

The Assembly then proceeded to elect a Vice-President in the room of Señor Pueyredon, who, as a member of the Argentine delegation, had withdrawn from the proceedings. In a secret ballot Señor Blanco (Uruguay) was elected by a large majority.

THE LANGUAGE QUESTION.

It would seem as if some members of the Assembly contemplate overcoming the language difficulty between the nations which are members of the League by promoting the study of Esperanto. At all events a draft resolution, signed by some of the most distinguished delegates, was tabled this evening. It expressed interest in the experiments in the official teaching of this language in the public schools of some members of the League, and a hope that this practice would become more general throughout the world. The resolution also directed the Secretary-General to prepare for the next Assembly a report on the results attained in teaching Esperanto.

Mr. Balfour then ascended the tribune, and presented the report of his committee on the question of the election of four non-permanent members of the Council of the League. It was evident from the report that a wide difference of opinion prevailed, and some of the resolutions were only carried by a majority of one, with many members not voting. Mr. Balfour himself was obviously not convinced of the legality of the whole of the committee's decisions. In regard to one proposal—namely, to forbid the re-election of a non-permanent member of the Council after he had served a term on that body—Mr. Balfour coined a new word, which he said was barbarous, but the only one suitable. This was "non-re-eligibility," and he said it was doubtful whether the Assembly, in face of the Covenant, could impose restrictions on the election of non-permanent members of the Council or direct that the members should be chosen from a particular geographical area. This latter phrase had reference to a suggested regulation that one member should be chosen from Asia, and as Japan is a permanent member of the Council, the wish of the committee obviously was to secure the representation of China on that body.

AN UNCOMPROMISING DEBATE.

A long and somewhat uncompromising debate ensued, and a variety of amendments was proposed. There appeared little prospect of an agreement being arrived at, and the President was evidently very uneasy at the turn events were taking. Eventually Dr. Benes (Czecho-Slovakia) suggested that the Assembly should elect four non-permanent members for one year only, without any restrictions, and that the resolutions of the committee be referred to the committee appointed to consider amendments to the Covenant, which will report next September to the Assembly. Mr. Balfour expressed his willingness to accept this solution, because, as he said, it seemed quite clear that the resolutions by his committee were, in the opinion of high legal authorities of the League, not within the powers conferred upon it, and, if adopted, could not be enforced. He therefore proposed that the Assembly should only decide that the period of office of the present four non-permanent members of the Council (Belgium, Brazil, Spain, and Greece) should terminate on Dec. 31; that the other proposals of the committee be referred to the Committee on Amendments to the Covenant; and that the Assembly be recommended to elect four non-permanent members of the Council, three from Europe and American States and one from among States in Asia and the rest of the world. These proposals were adopted unanimously.
